A painting representing the capture of Blinkie Morgan, is to be on exhibition at the art store of C. L. Wilson in the Centennial block, every day this week, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. It is the work of Mr. Wilson, and the receipts of the exhibition are for the benefit of Mrs. C. L. Lynch, whose husband was killed at the time of the capture.

James Hamilton's camp, on McGinn creek, has broke up. The amount of logs banked there for Churchill and Pack is 3,000,000 feet. We are informed that all the pine on that classic stream has now been lumbered except a few small scattered lots. An immense amount of pine has been lumbered on that stream in the years gone by.

A statement was recently laid before the Legislature by the Secretary of State which showed the amount of salaries paid to the various Boards of Supervisors of this State. The total amount paid in 1888 was: Milage, $7,787.72; wages, $71,079.03. Of this amount the Alpena supervisors received $289.48, of which $40.48 was for milage. The year previous the amount paid the supervisors of this county was $299.24.

Some unknown individual has tried to scare Muellerweiss & Co. with an anonymous letter, and tries to make out that it emanates from the white caps. The subject of the letter is in regard to the firm keeping open after the time the grocery firms agreed to close during the winter. The letter contains the usual threats in case of noncompliance with the order. The firm says that they have not violated the agreement made with the other merchants.

About four o'clock Saturday morning the house of Charles Woodrow, on Tuttle street, near Eighth street, was destroyed by fire. It was a disagreeable morning to be turned out of house and home, as the temperature was low. The house was occupied by the family of Abel Wilcox. The loss on the house is about $800, which was insured for $500 in a company of which B. F. Luce & Son are agents. On the furniture was a $400 insurance by the Wilcoxes & Morse agency. Most of the furniture was saved.

Carl L. Wilson has on exhibition a fine oil painting at his art room in the Centennial block. It represents the capture of Blinkie Morgan. In size the canvas is four and a half feet by seven feet. Blinkie is represented on the floor struggling with sheriff Lynch and his assistants McDonald and Connors. The revolver is just discharged. Westrope and others are just rushing through a door. The scene is life like. On a table in front of the painting is the revolver with which Lynch was killed, also several other relics of the capture.

The new version of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, and known as Good against Evil, is by far the best play that has been made from Stevenson's work. The one satisfaction that it gives is the happy way it ends, and Mr. Davidson has certainly made a strong hit wherever he appeared. Ramie Austin's work has shown great improvement. Although she has always been one of the foremost actresses, the work she does in this play is indeed a great credit to her. She is a charming woman, possessing all the happy gifts of nature, and endowed with a naturalness that is sublime. Dore Davidson has a fortune in store for him, as Good Against Evil—D. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, is one of the best attractions offered to the public.—New York Dramatic Times, June 30th, 1888.

The case of Anna Dehring vs. the Messrs. Comstock, was decided Wednesday last, after a three days' trial in the Circuit Court. This suit was caused by some of the men employed by the firm who let a bale of hay fall on the woman. The men were engaged in getting some baled hay out of the Comstock barn on Chisholm street. In so doing a bale of hay fell and struck the woman, and for the damages she then sustained she brought suit against the firm who employed the men. One of the men testified that he shouted out to the woman to keep away, and gave her notice of the danger. The jury rendered a verdict in favor of the woman, and awarded her $800 damages.

House bill No. 199, entitled "A bill to authorize the Common Council of the City of Alpena to contract with the Alpena City Water Company to furnish water to said city for fire, domestic and other purposes, and to provide for payment of same by taxation," has passed both houses of the Legislature, and is now a law. It gives the Common Council power to make any contract with the Water Co. for furnishing water for city purposes, and to assess the amount of the water tax against the tax payers of this city, provided the Water Company agrees to the contract. Of course any contract that is agreed upon will be published by the Council before it is ratified, so that the people may pass their verdict upon it.

The record for the opening of navigation at this port is not to be broken this year. It is not the fault of the weather as a steamer could have reached this port on the 6th. The reason is that owners of steamers do not care to place boats in commission at present, because there is no profit in doing so. Years ago it was different, and the first steamer reaped a rich financial harvest, as there were large quantities of freight to be brought up and hundreds of passengers were waiting to go down on her. If a steamer was to leave here now she would not get many passengers. In the years gone by, men, who had worked in the camps, had to remain in the city for several weeks until the first steamer arrived. Now they leave on the railroad. There is probably a cargo or two of freight waiting for the steamers.

The Legislative correspondent of the Detroit Free Press writes that paper as follows on the 6th: "Senator Harshaw presented the petition of the supervisors and 124 citizens of Alpena county to repeal the mortgage tax law. They say that the practical working of the act, instead of equalizing the burdens of taxation on real and personal property, develops the subtlety of personal property to evade taxation; it adds new and oppressive burdens to the overburdened debtor class and is daily requiring them to surrender their titles to money lenders, exemplifying the pernicious principle of governmental interference with the relations of debtor and creditor, causing greatest injury to those it seeks most to benefit; it discriminates against home capital in favor of foreign capital, and manifest the infirmities of double taxes."

Miss Kate Knight died at the residence of her father, on State street, about nine o'clock Saturday morning last, aged 20 years. Consumption was the cause of her death. The funeral took place Monday, services being held at Trinity church. Rev. J. A. Nock officiated, and delivered a very affecting sermon. The church was crowded with people. The floral offerings were very fine, among which were a cross of white roses from the members of the masonic lodge, callilies from the Trinity Sunday school teachers, while the young ladies of St. Margaret's Guild, of which the deceased was a member, each laid on the coffin a bunch of white roses. In addition, a sprig of lilacs and a sprig of evergreen.

Last Saturday Madam Omas, a fortune teller, was escorted to East Saginaw, by deputy sheriff Patrick Kane. She was wanted at that city to answer to the charge of embezzlement. It is said that she was formerly located at East Saginaw, and made a business of telling fortunes. Those persons who patronized her there were requested to bring jewelry and other valuables as she could tell the fortunes better after an examination of the said articles. One woman was told to bring her husband's Sunday suit and then she would be told what he did when he had them on and was absent from home. The clothes were brought and, at request of the fortune teller, were left for a few days in order to allow her to make a close examination. When she called to hear what her husband had been doing, she found the future reader had gone, and the clothes had gone also. The facts of the case came to light when the husband wanted to wear his holiday suit. The matter was placed in the hands of the police, and the fortune teller was traced to this city, where she was captured. Her husband was taken along with her. She is reported to have done a good business in this city unfolding the secrets of the misty future.

Notice to Stockholders of Alpena Loan and Building Association.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the association will be held at their office, room 4, Davison block, in the city of Alpena, Michigan, on Tuesday, March 26th, 1889, at eight o'clock P. M., for the purpose of electing three directors, in accordance with the provisions of the by-laws, and transacting such other business as may legally come before the meeting.

O. L. PARTRIDGE, Secretary.

Levy, the Cornetist.

It is very seldom that an entertainment causes as much dissatisfaction as did the first one given by the Levy troupe at the Opera House last Friday night. The general expectation of those who patronized the troupe, and paid $1 for a seat, was that the members of the troupe who supported Levy would be capable actors. Levy's support did not please the people here. The various solos and quartets were rendered miserably; the singing is not considered fair, and the general belief is that many of the citizens can discount the singing that was rendered by the members of the troupe. The only pleasure derived from Friday night's entertainment was the fine cornet playing of Jules Levy. As regards that musician, his efforts to please were successful. The second act of the opera "Martha" was rendered, but it is impossible to score a success with a fragment of a play. In rendering the overture the pianist did the gymnastic on the keys with his fingers in a very commendable manner. The harmony and variety of tone that Levy can produce from his cornet is wonderful. He was recalled several times and responded with selections.

The result of the first concert was a small attendance on Saturday night, and it would have been much smaller but for the fact that many had bought tickets some days before. The solos and quartets were about on a level with those rendered the preceding night, and the entertainment dragged along wearily, with the exception of Levy's cornet playing, until the second part began, and then a great change took place in the singing and acting of the much talked of four. It hardly seemed as if they were the same persons who had been practicing singing a short time before. They were now full of life and vigor, and not only woke up the audience, but caused many a warm applause to be cheerfully given. It was Balfo's opera "Sleeping Queen," and contained many pretty scenes and laughable situations, while the music was spirited and full of harmony. The cast was as follows: Regent, Sig. Maina; Donna Agnus, Miss McNeil; Queen of Leon, Madame Levy; Don Phillip d'Aguellar, Sig. Tambrilrik.

The receipts of the first night must have been over $400. It is our belief that if the same troupe was to come here again it would not pay expenses.
